I will go in the front entrance of the library. It looks like this:

This is the reception desk at the library. Someone will say hello to me when I come in.

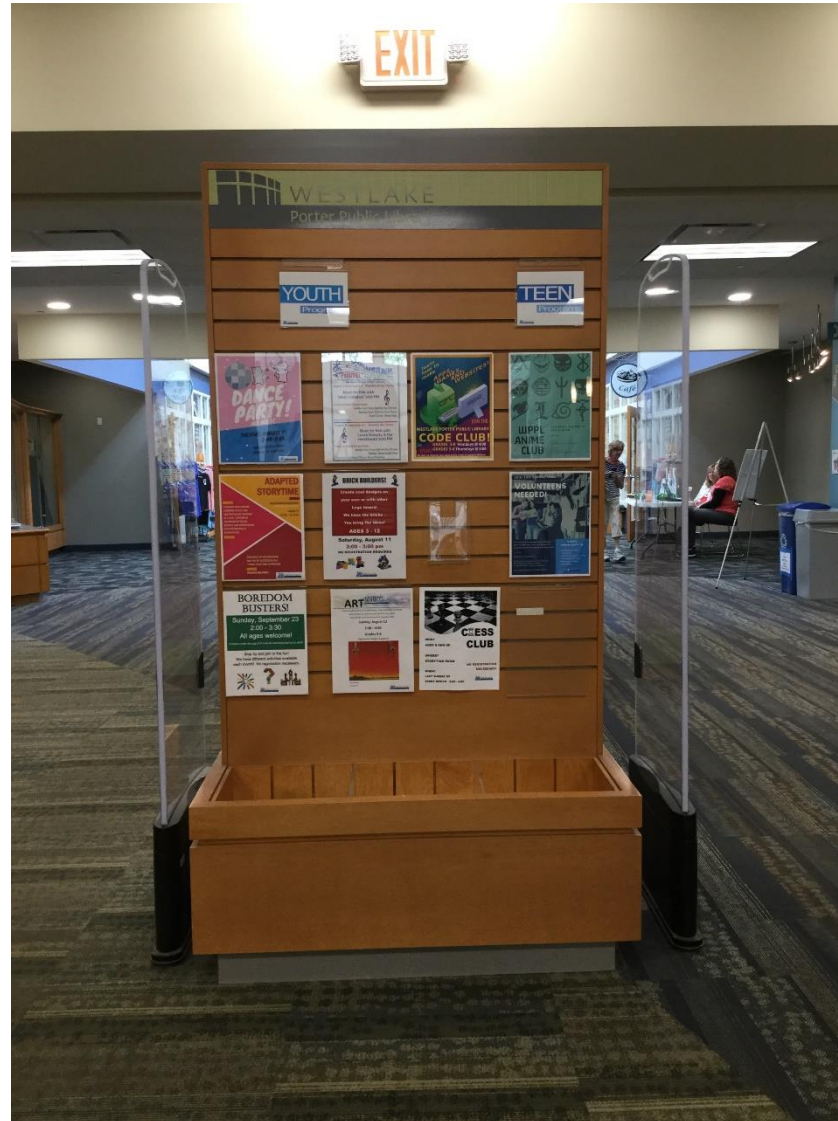

This is where I can return anything I borrowed from the library.

This is how I know someone works at the library.
All the people who work or volunteer at the library wear a badge like this.

This is where I can find out what programs are happening. I can attend ones that fit my age group!

This is the Youth Services Desk. People at this desk can help answer questions and find books and movies!

This is the Youth Services Area. I can read books, find movies, play or sit quietly at the tables.

I can play on the computers at the library.

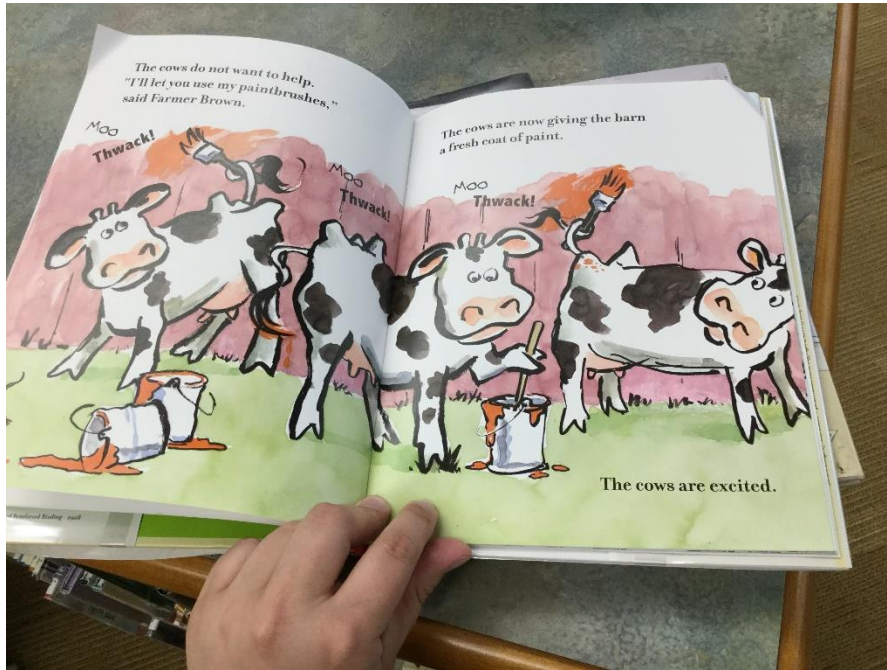

If I want to check out materials, someone in my family needs to have a library card. They look like this:

I can use the displays to help me find new books to read. I can check out items off a display, if I want too.

I must respect library materials.

THIS

NOT THIS

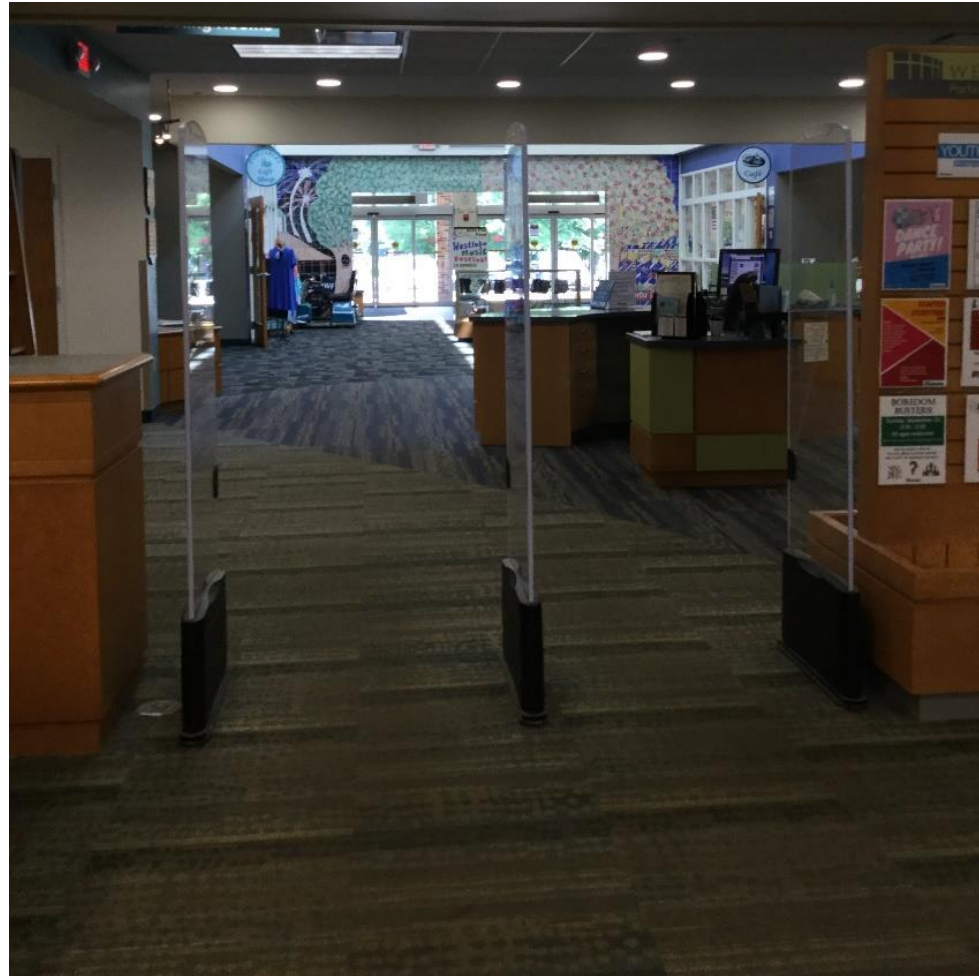

This is where I can use the bathroom at the library.

I can use a self-check machine to check-out materials myself.

These are the security gates. Sometimes these gates beep. If that happens, I just have to check with the person at the circulation desk.

It's time to go! I am finished at the library. I will come visit again soon!
